

Here's the Buzz:
The energy of a scavenger hunt.
The excitement of making a difference.
Beehive Building is great fun!

BEEHIVE BUILDING

Teamwork for a Great Cause!

Benefits & Results:

- Builds camaraderie
- Promotes team interaction
- Inspires respect and understanding of ethical values, people and communities
- Makes a global difference in reducing poverty

And now for something completely different!

What if a corporate team building activity could stimulate employee teamwork while helping stimulate income generation for people in a developing country? Leave it to TeamBonding to find a way! In this fun and competitive team building activity, your teams first test their wits as they embark on a wild and wacky scavenger hunt to search for clues that lead to Beehive Building challenge supplies! Queen Bees are in the know and lead the way, communicating only by way of their own version of the "waggle dance" – using only non-verbal clues to lead their team in the right direction!

When the hunt is over, teams begin the construction of beehive frames. Beehive frames? Yep. These are donated to an enterprising women's cooperative in Mexicali, Mexico that has embraced beekeeping as a way to generate family income. Your teams' participation makes it possible for these women to produce and sell beeswax candles, honey-flavored baked goods, healing salves, bee pollen, hand and facial creams and more.

Building beehive frames also builds teamwork, camaraderie and cooperation, and brings teams together for a great cause!

Best of all, at the end of the day, your teams have had a great time while making a meaningful contribution to a community in need. This really is one event where everybody wins.

Ideal Usage:

- Conference/meeting breaks
- Project start-up, conclusion or mid-project motivation
- Award trips, annual meetings, retreats and celebrations

Group Size: 50 to 500 people

Time: 2 to 4 hours

Space Requirements:

Ballroom, conference room or outdoors (weather permitting).