Improv performers and trainers use improvisation skills onstage to make people laugh. Teambonding facilitators specialize in corporate communication skills training and teaching people HOW to improvise. We teach the vital soft business skills that they don't teach in an MBA program...yet should: focus, trust, proactive listening, making each other look good, being present, living in the moment. We teach the essential, yet often overlooked or discarded, communication and listening skills that will consistently improve the quality of your work, home and social relationships.

We have entertained and educated employees in every known industry, from network execs to nuns, from lawyers to lumberjacks. We've been hired by 65 of this year's Fortune 500 companies, often repeatedly. We offer vital information in a format that's thoroughly entertaining and makes the discussion of key concepts both more resonant and memorable for your people. And that's the goal— give them a great experience that will bond them socially and empower them in their work capacity.

Whether your responsibilities are executive, administrative, or service, we offer effective, immediate solutions for social challenges common to ANY workplace by exploring the improviser's toolbox. Feel free to choose a single topic or mix and match. We often create hybrid team building programs based upon the client's immediate needs.

TeamProv was great. Our Lead did a nice job of creating a fun and safe environment. We had a couple of "breakthroughs." The feedback from individuals was consistently good.
